Hi Seth. It has been exactly a week ago today that we parted and I still have a bad taste in my mouth from the farewell I gave you. I'm really not good in those kinds of moments...sentiment impedes my ability to express how I feel in words.

I'll tell you that this last week with Beyond Therapy was a little crazy with the scene changes, but we had fun with it and Diana and the others helped us out a lot. We had a bigger audience because there were a few television reports about the show and that attracted more people.

It is difficult for me to tell you how much I appreciate the fact that you have decided to make me a part of your life. When I have you in front of me, words stick in my throat, I forget English, and in the end I act like a complete idiot...but I want you to know that thanks to you I have a better life, with you I have confidence in my work and I feel like the most fortunate woman in the world because of knowing you and having your friendship. To me, you are a special person and you give me the possibility to meet other people as special as you that fill my life with happiness.

For me it is grand to be able to continue working with you. I enjoy it a lot, and I'd like for you to tell me when Durang sees the taping of the show, and how he feels about it, so that afterward I can write to him.

Let Tom know that for all of us it is essential that he continues to accompany us in our adventures because his music fills the theater with light and makes all of us shine.

Thank you once again. Thank you. Take care of yourself and say hello to Carmen, the dean, and your wife.

Kisses.

Alianne.
